Coodo is an architectural office located in Slovenia that has developed a line of modular units that are perfectly modern and would work just about anywhere. Each unit can be customized to the owner's needs and specifications. They've designed a multi-functional pavilion, a pergola, a summer kitchen, mobile living units (small summer houses), and a residential building (i.e., a house/condo). I love the rounded corners and simple designs, making these a great option for people looking for small modular spaces.
